About the Conference

The Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS) 2023, Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita (BNSS) 2023, and Bharatiya Sakshya Adhiniyam (BSA) 2023 have ushered in significant reforms in India's criminal justice system, replacing the IPC of 1860, CrPC of 1974, and Indian Evidence Act of 1872, respectively. These new laws introduce key changes such as a shift towards the involvement of technology procedures, stricter procedural timelines and forensic-based investigations, and a renewed focus on justice and reformation. However, while these laws set high standards for criminal adjudication, their practical implementation remains challenging, requiring a balance between legal ideals and ground realities.

Since their enforcement in July 2024, a crucial need has emerged to critically examine the functioning and implementation of these laws.

About the Conference

The conference aims to bring together Judges, Advocates, Public Prosecutors, Police Officers, Academicians and Students to discuss the effectiveness of these reforms, identify the challenges to effective implementation, and recommend policy reforms based on the practical experiences of key stakeholders. The conference aims to provide valuable insights into bridging the gap between legislative intent and on-ground implementation.

Discussions in the Conference will focus on contrasts between the old and new criminal laws, practical difficulties faced by different stakeholders, and harmonizing legal principles with procedural realities.

By fostering critical engagement and informed debate, this conference seeks to ensure that the implementation of these laws is both effective and just, ultimately contributing to a more robust and equitable criminal justice system.
