OVERVIEW

The 4th International Conference on Law and Social Transformation (ICLS-2025) explores the dynamic interplay between legal frameworks, social transformation, and sustainable development. In an era of unprecedented global challenges, law serves as both a catalyst and a foundation for equitable progress. This conference will examine how legal innovation can drive systemic change, address environmental crises, advance human rights, foster green economies, and empower marginalized communities through inclusive legal advocacy.

Hosted by the School of Law, Alliance University, this annual conference brings together legal experts, policymakers, activists, and scholars to critically assess the role of law in achieving social transformation through law and sustainable development goals (SDGs). Through interdisciplinary dialogue, the conference aims to develop actionable strategies that promote resilience, justice, and sustainability in an increasingly complex world.

Please join us on September 27, 2025, as we collaborate to shape a more just and sustainable future through the transformative power of law and policy.
