CONCEPT NOTE

Women and children form the backbone of any society, and their protection and empowerment are key indicators of a nation's progress. Despite significant legal reforms and global initiatives, women and children across the world continue to face discrimination, exploitation, violence, and denial of fundamental rights. From domestic abuse and trafficking to lack of access to education and healthcare, the challenges are multifaceted and deeply rooted in socio-economic and cultural norms.

This Two-Day International Seminar on "Protection of Women and Children Rights" aims to provide a platform for meaningful discussions, knowledge exchange, and policy deliberations among academicians, legal professionals, activists, researchers, and students from across the globe. Through interactive sessions and expert panels, the seminar seeks to explore both international and national perspectives, highlight best practices, and propose actionable strategies to strengthen the rights and protections for women and children.

The seminar will not only review existing legal frameworks but also focus on their implementation, shortcomings, and the need for holistic, inclusive, and sustainable approaches to ensure justice and dignity for all.

Objectives

The seminar seeks to:

- To analyze the current legal and policy frameworks for the protection of women and children at national and international levels.
- To identify emerging challenges, threats, and trends affecting the rights of women and children in the 21st century.
- To facilitate the exchange of ideas and best practices among stakeholders committed to human rights.
- To promote interdisciplinary research and collaborations focused on human rights, gender justice, and child welfare.
