ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The fast advancement of science and technology in the current era has had a profound impact on all facets of existence. In the contemporary world, crime and criminology are no longer regarded as distinct domains, but rather as interconnected with various other sciences. Politics Science, sociology, psychology, anthropology, economics, and other multidisciplinary subjects are included in this list. A crucial advancement in crime prevention has been the adoption of a multidisciplinary approach in the field of criminal justice administration. This development is noteworthy, as criminology seeks to prevent crime in society rather than only understanding criminal behaviours in theory. In a dynamic environment, criminology, law, and forensic science serve as fundamental components of the contemporary criminal justice system.

OBJECTIVE OF THE CONFERENCE

Together, let us determine the future of the criminal justice system, advocate for social justice, and construct a safer and more fair society through this conference. The “International Conference on Forensic Science, Law, and Criminal Justice” aims to establish a vibrant, enlightening, and all-encompassing setting where expertise, originality, and optimal methods converge to promote the pursuit of justice.

ABOUT THE CENTRE FOR FORENSIC SCIENCE (CFS):

The Centre for Forensic Science (CFS) is an academic and research-driven initiative dedicated to exploring the intersection of forensic science and law. It aims to bridge the gap between forensic methodologies and legal practice by equipping law students with the skills to critically analyse forensic evidence. The Centre conducts workshops, training sessions, and guest lectures featuring forensic experts to provide hands-on exposure to techniques such as crime scene analysis, fingerprint examination, toxicology, and digital forensics. Additionally, it engages in research and publications on contemporary forensic issues, including the admissibility of forensic evidence and its role in criminal investigations. Collaborating with forensic laboratories, judicial bodies, and investigative agencies, the Centre fosters academic and practical learning, ensuring that students understand the real-world application of forensic science in the legal system. Through mock trials and case analyses, it also enhances advocacy skills by demonstrating how forensic findings impact legal proceedings. Given the increasing reliance on scientific evidence in criminal justice, the Centre for Forensic Science plays a crucial role in preparing future legal professionals for evidence-based practice.

CONCEPT NOTE:

The 2nd International Conference on Forensic Science, Law, and Criminal Justice, scheduled from 16th to 18th September 2025, aims to explore the evolving role of forensic science, criminology, and law in the modern criminal justice system. The rapid advancement of science and technology has significantly influenced all aspects of life, including crime prevention and investigation. In today's world, crime and criminology are no longer isolated disciplines but are deeply interconnected with various fields such as political science, sociology, psychology, anthropology, and economics. The adoption of a multidisciplinary approach in criminal justice administration has been a crucial development, enabling more effective crime prevention strategies rather than just theoretical understandings of criminal behaviour.

In this dynamic environment, forensic science, law, and criminology function as essential pillars of the modern criminal justice system. This conference will bring together scholars, forensic experts, legal professionals, and policymakers to discuss the latest advancements and challenges in forensic investigations, legal evidence, criminal profiling, and crime prevention strategies. Through interdisciplinary discussions and research collaborations, the event aims to enhance the role of forensic science in delivering justice, strengthening legal frameworks, and adapting to emerging forms of crime.
